

My name is Amber Isbell, and I am from Thomaston, GA. I was honestly filled with a bit of trepidation after high school, a bit of nervousness in regards to where my future would lead me, but that future brought me here to Gordon State College. Coming here, furthermore, has been one of the best decisions I have made so far; it was, if not the first or second, then the third step towards being who I am still becoming. I may still not know exactly what I want to do with my life after schooling, but I have found possibilities and a general direction, which is all anyone can really expect in regards to the future. I am particularly fond of those Honors' courses that I have taken so far, as I have not yet experienced such a class wherein I did not both meet some truly amazing people and find new and creative ways of thinking.

Last December, I graduated with an Associate in Psychology; in January, I began working towards a Human Services Bachelor. I will probably drop off after that to work – though graduate school looks like a distinct possibility later on.
